

BIOGRAPHY

Eric Goldstein serves as the Executive Assistant Director for Cybersecurity for the Department of Homeland Security's Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA) as of Feb. 14, 2021. In this role, Goldstein leads CISA's mission to protect and strengthen the nation's critical infrastructure against cyber threats.

Previously, Goldstein was the Global Head of Cybersecurity Policy, Strategy, and Regulation at Goldman Sachs, where he led development of the firm's cybersecurity risk management program. He served at CISA's precursor agency, the National Protection and Programs Directorate, from 2013 to 2017 in various roles including Policy Advisor for Federal Network Resilience, Branch Chief for Cybersecurity Partnerships and Engagement, Senior Advisor to the Assistant Secretary for Cybersecurity, and Senior Counselor to the Under Secretary.

At other points in his career, Goldstein practiced cybersecurity law at an international law firm, led cybersecurity research and analysis projects at a federally-funded research and development center, and served as a Fellow in Advanced Cyber Studies at the Center for Strategic and International Studies.

He is a graduate of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, the Georgetown University School of Public Policy, and Georgetown University Law Center.

Eric Goldstein
Executive Assistant
Director for Cybersecurity
