

LIST OF FEDERAL FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS FUNDING EMERGENCY COMMUNICATIONS

DEFEND TODAY,
SECURE TOMORROW

OVERVIEW

This list identifies federal financial assistance programs (i.e., grants, loans, cooperative agreements) that support emergency communications investments. Periodic updates will be posted on the SAFECOM Funding website as new programs are announced. Note that other opportunities may exist. Entities seeking funding should refer to the federal government website Grants.gov to determine if other opportunities are available. In addition, refer to the specific Notice of Funding Opportunity (NOFO), as this is a summary of program information related to emergency communications and does not reflect all program requirements.

For ease of use, this list is divided into tables organized by federal departments and agencies, which offer federal financial assistance programs funded by the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2020 (Public Law No. 116-94), the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2021 (Public Law No. 116-260), the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2022 (Public Law No. 117-103), other legislation (e.g., American Rescue Plan Act, Infrastructure Investment and Jobs Act), and departmental discretion. While the federal programs included may not focus primarily on emergency communications, the program goals, objectives, and allowable costs may support activities to further the emergency communications mission. This list aims to identify programs that may otherwise be overlooked by state, local, tribal, and territorial government applicants.

In addition to federal financial assistance programs, entities should also consider alternate funding mechanisms (e.g., bonds, public-private partnerships, user fees, special taxes) as a source of capital. Entities should work with financial experts to identify each mechanism's applicability to emergency communications projects and understand terms and requirements. For more information, including examples of alternate funding sources and best practices, reference the Funding Mechanisms Guide for Public Safety Communications.

Entities that are applying for federal financial assistance for emergency communications projects should reference the latest annual SAFECOM Guidance on Emergency Communications Grants. The guidance provides general information on eligible activities, technical standards, and other terms and conditions that are common to most federal programs funding emergency communications. Note, recipients of the Federal Emergency Management Agency's preparedness grants must comply with SAFECOM Guidance, as required in its Appendix D. Other federal programs encourage entities to follow SAFECOM Guidance recommendations and best practices, specifically its guidance to applicants on:

- Recommendations for planning, coordinating, and implementing emergency communications projects;
- Emergency communications activities that can be funded through federal grants;
- Overview of emergency communications systems and capabilities; and
- Technical standards that facilitate interoperability.

SAFECOM Guidance and this list of federal financial assistance programs are developed by the Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA), in collaboration with SAFECOM, the National Council of Statewide Interoperability Coordinators, as well as federal partners in the Emergency Communications Preparedness Center. Direct any questions on this resource to CISA at ECGrants@hq.dhs.gov.
